

'Find a project' feature for FP7 projects now online

CORDIS, the Community research and Development Information Service, has added a new project search function to its Seventh Framework Programme (FP7) website. By selecting 'Find a project' in the website's navigation bar, users will have access to a search form, enabling them ...

CORDIS, the Community research and Development Information Service, has added a new project search function to its Seventh Framework Programme (FP7) website.

By selecting 'Find a project' in the website's navigation bar, users will have access to a search form, enabling them to conduct free text searches. Users can also search by thematic priorities - from FP7-ENERGY to FP7-TRANSPORT - or by a specific activity within each priority.

Furthermore, project information can be retrieved by country, with queries resulting in a list of projects coordinated by an institution or organisation in the country in question.

Project details are published on CORDIS following the negotiation and signature of grant agreements between the European Commission and beneficiaries. This means that they are only made available after the selection procedure is completed.

Last update: 28 May 2008

Permalink: <https://cordis.europa.eu/article/id/29487-find-a-project-feature-for-fp7-projects-now-online>

