1 Executive summary

According to the project's Description of Work (DoW), main aim of the EFG1914 project was to digitise and give online access to 665 hours of film about and from the period of World War I. In addition to digitising films, nine out of the 21 archives in the consortium set out to also digitise 5'600 photos, posters, programmes and journals and give online access to them via the European Film Gateway and Europeana.

The digitisation of both film and film-related content was carried out by the archives individually and according to their own preferences. The DoW foresaw that film should be digitised in high resolution of at least HD, ideally 2K. The non-AV material, too, was supposed to be digitised in high quality. The high resolution versions should then be downsised for publication on the internet.

This report describes the progress in film digitisation and gives detailed insight in the nature of the films digitised. It also includes the full list of titles digitised in the project. To find out more about the digital workflow and how the content was selected and prepared for the European Film Gateway and Europeana, please refer to D1.2 "First digitisation progress report to the Commission"¹.

To monitor the progress in film digitisation, WP1 leader Det Danske Filminstitut set up templates for digitisation lists for all partners in the beginning of the project. All archives contributing to EFG1914 were asked to fill in these templates and to update the lists in quarterly intervals. All numbers, graphs and tables provided in this report are based on the indications made by the partners in the digitisation lists by the end of the project.

The lists shows that by the end of the project, all archives in the consortium had digitised a total of 2'591 film titles with a total duration of 701 hours. This means the amount of hours made viewable on europeanfilmgateway.eu and Europeana.eu exceeds the goal of having to digitise 665 hours of film as mentioned in the DoW. In addition to the content they digitised for EFG1914, project partner Imperial War Museums has made available an extra of 38 hours to the project, which they had digitised already before the project. Further material from four archives outside the consortium could also be included and made available via EFG. The total amount of film titles related to World War One now available on EFG amounts to 2'833 titles and 740 hours that are now viewable free-of-charge online. By end of April 2014 this number is expected to rise even further. In total EFG1914 will be able to make available 755 hours of digitised content by then.

In addition to the AV material, nine archives in the consortium digitised 6'185 nonAV objects of which 5'601 are available on the European Film Gateway. The remaining nonAV objects will be made available online by end of April latest, so that the goal of 5'600 nonAV objects is not only met, but will also be exceeded. Details on the digitisation progress and the content are available in D5.1 “Report on type and quantity of non-film material digitised”.

2 Objectives Year 2

In the beginning of the project all archives in the consortium compiled detailed lists containing information on the content that they found applicable for the EFG1914 project. As stated in the DOW, content relevant to the project consisted of either films produced in the war years or else films from other periods of time that have a clear reference to the First World War or deal with the effects of the war. Both, non-fiction and fiction films were considered to be of relevance. Information on the selected films was collected via the online project management tool smartsheet.com that was also used to conclude and sum up the results by the end of the second project year. More details on how smartsheet was used within the project can be found in D1.2.

According to the DoW, by the end of the EFG1914 project the participating archives were supposed to have digitised and made available online the following number of hours:

Partner	Goal Hours

3 Results of the project

The digitisation progress was monitored throughout the whole project by WP 1 leader Det Danske Filminstitut, who compiled quarterly reports of the progress in the individual archives. These reports were internal milestones and presented in project meetings to the consortium.

- M6 Digitisation progress report 3 (February 2013)
- M7 Digitisation progress report 4 (May 2013)
- M8 Digitisation progress report 5 (August 2013)
- M9 Digitisation progress report 6 (November 2013)
- M10 Digitisation progress report 7 (February 2014)
- D1.3 Final digitisation progress report to the Commission (February 2014)

The milestones summarise the evaluation of the individual archives' digitisation lists by DFI and allowed to monitor and control that the project was progressing according to the project's goals. Temporary stagnation in the digitisation workflow at some archives (which rarely happened) could be detected and remedied immediately. Frequent communication between the WP1 leader and all contributing archives took place in preparation for the milestones. Results of the individual digitisation lists were compiled into one large single list in quarterly intervals.

By the end of the project all digitisation lists could be considered final and updated information on all selected film titles was provided by the archives in the following categories:

- Main title of film
- English translation of title
- Country of origin
- Year of production /release
- Director or Production Company
- Film category (Documentary, Newsreel, Advertisement, etc.)
- Film format (35mm, 16mm, etc.)
- Film element (Positive, Negative, Dub, etc.)
- Rights status (Rights protected, Public domain, etc.)
- Expected digitisation month
- Quality of scan (HD, 2K)
- Online duration (in minutes)
- Expected delivery month to EFG portal
- Project status (Selected, Digitised, Encoded, Delivered to EFG, De-selected, etc.)

- Online at partner website (yes/no)
- Delivered to EFG portal (yes/no)
- Internal remarks

Many of the categories mentioned above include predefined dropdown values in order to ensure a meaningful evaluation of the entries.

By the end of the second year, a total of 2'591 titles that amount to 701 hours of film were selected for digitisation. All of these films were digitised in high quality (mostly 2K, at least HD) and made available in a lower quality for online publication. Further 427 titles that were originally included in the lists and considered for digitisation had to be de-selected. Reasons for this were mainly that the rights could not be cleared successfully, the source material was too poor in physical quality to be digitised or else the archives considered other titles more interesting to be digitised in the scope of the project.

By the end of the first project year, 210 of 654 hours were digitised. The goal for Year 1 set in the DoW for Year 1 was 164 hours. This positive development did continue during the second project year. The quarterly milestones revealed that by May 2013 58% of the overall AV content had been digitised; in July 2013 65%. By October 2013, 80% of the AV content was available as digital files and the scanning activities were finalised in December 2013, when more than 100% of the content foreseen in the DOW was digitised. At no time in the project there were major problems that had the potential to endanger the project goals.

The following table shows the final digitisation results of the archives by the end of the project:

Partner	Number of titles	Number of hours digitised	Number of hours according to DOW	Percentage
Arhiva Nationala de Filme (ANF)	12	3,0	3,0	100,00%

Österreichisches Filmmuseum (OFM)	48	8,0	8,0	100,00%
TOTAL	2'591	701,3	665,5	105,38%

These 2'591 titles equal ca. 701 hours of film – over 34 hours more than the overall goal of EFG1914.

3.1 Additional content aggregated within EFG1914

In addition to the titles digitised in EFG1914, further WWI-related films could be aggregated. Most notably, EFG1914 partner Imperial War Museum delivered 171 further titles from their collection with a total duration of 38 hours. This content was provided by them in addition the 196,5 hours they digitised within EFG1914.

Other material not specified in the DOW came from archives outside the consortium listed in the following table:

Archive	Number of titles available on EFG	Number of hours according to DOW	Number of hours available on EFG	Number of hours delivered or to be delivered to Europeana
IWM	171	-	38,0	38,0
Bundesarchiv Filmarchiv	37	-	7,0	7,0
Museo Nazionale del Cinema	18	-	4,0	4,0
Landesfilmsammlung Baden-Württemberg	19	-	2,0	2,0
National Library of Scotland	34	-	3,2	3,2
TOTAL EXTRA WWI CONTENT	279		54,0	54,0

In addition to the content digitised within EFG1914 this amounts to a total of 755 hours of films for EFG that equal 2'870 titles.

Project coordinator DIF is in contact with two further archives interested in contributing WWI material to the EFG portal: Cineteca Nazionale in Rome as well as the Russian State Film Archive Gosfilmofond that both have several film titles they would like to make available via EFG. In case of Cineteca Nazionale the content contribution is expected in May 2014. Regarding Gosfilmofond, there is no concrete plan for delivery yet, but it can be expected that a selection of Russian productions will be available by summer the latest.

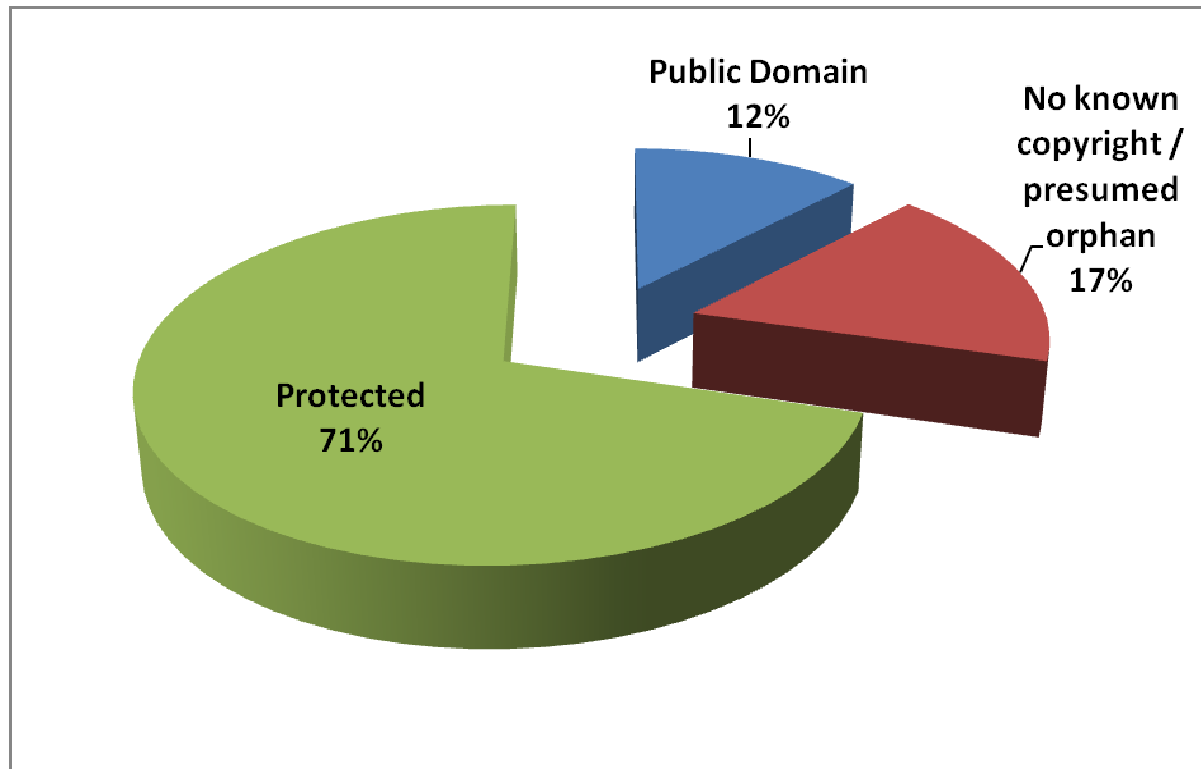

4 EFG1914 content: An overview

The following chapter illustrates different aspects of films digitised in EFG1914. The charts do not take into account the extra material provided from associated partners, but only focuses on the material digitised with the funding of the Commission for EFG1914.

4.1 Rights status

Archives were obliged to not only clear the films for the usage on their national portal, but also for international usage on the European Film Gateway and Europeana. Rights clearing was part of the WP2 activities. Despite some cases where rights held by third parties were not granted, negotiations with some major rights holders were successful and enabled the archives to make the promised amount of hours available online. The following pie chart shows that 29% of the films digitised are either presumed orphan or public domain. 71% of the films are still protected. Users interested in re-use of the films will profit from the rights research carried out by the archives in the project as they can be directly pointed to the respective rights holders. The rights of the majority of the protected films are held by only a few major rights holders, also simplifying rights clearing activities of potential users.

4.2 Country of production

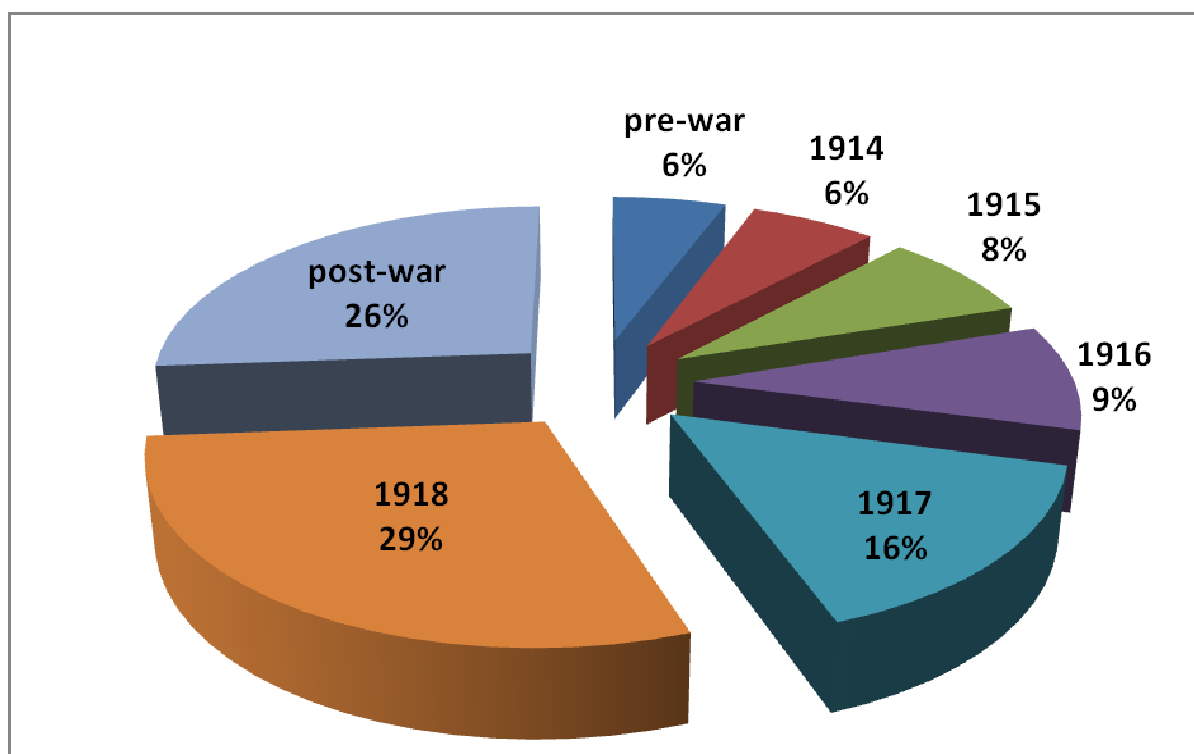

The graph shows the production countries of the films digitised in EFG1914. It is of little surprise that EFG1914 includes a lot of British productions, seeing that the Imperial War Museum is by far the biggest content provider in the project. However, even if archives tend to hold films predominantly from their own country, there is still quite a variety of films from different production countries in the individual archives, most notably probably in the collection of EYE Film Institute Netherlands. The films digitised within EFG1914 were produced in 24 different countries; they display pictures from a far greater variety of countries and regions though.

4.3 Year of production

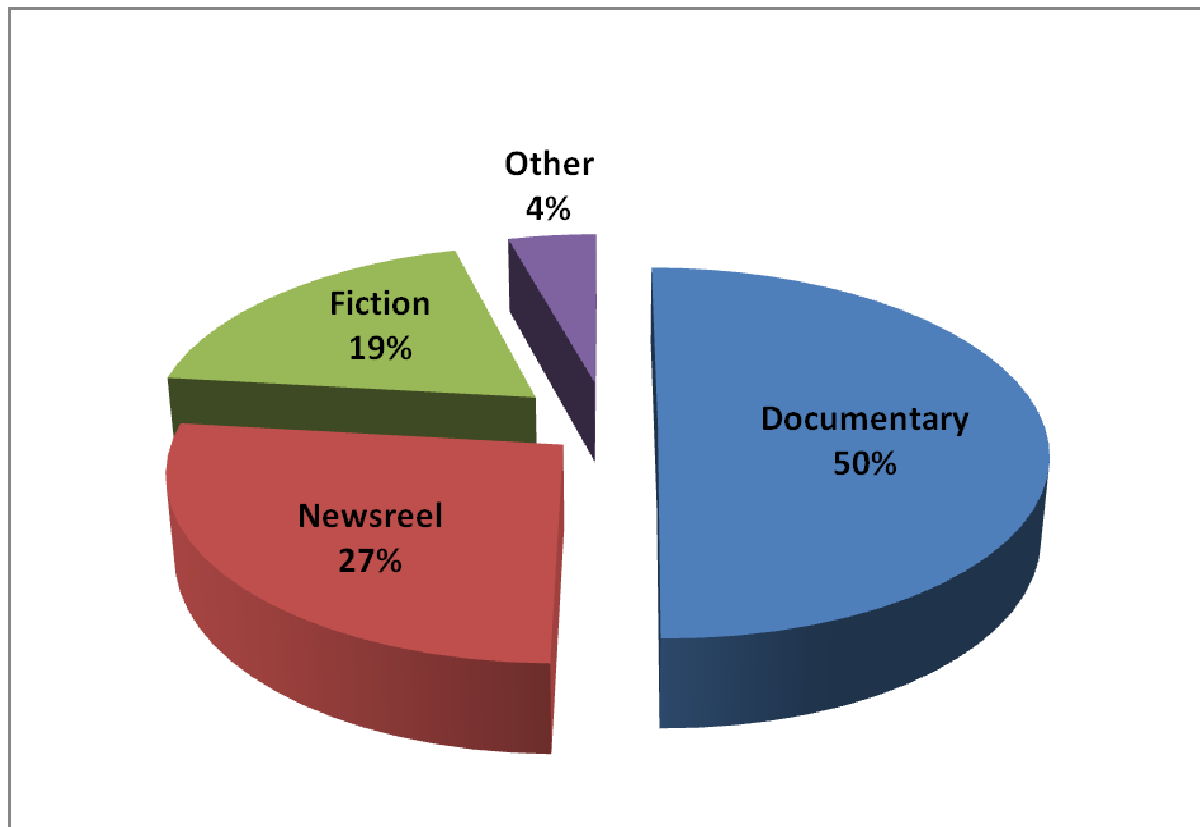

The following pie chart illustrates in which years the films digitised were produced. Around 6% of the titles originating from the years before the war (mainly 1912 and 1913 portraying events that directly lead up to WWI), 70% of the films were produced between 1914-1918 and another 26% originate from the years after the end of the war. Since the propaganda film production during the First World War reached its heydays in 1917 and 1918, it could only be expected that most of the content digitised for EFG1914 comes from those two years. The films produced after the war, are often especially interesting as the film production was less controlled and censored by the states and it became – at least temporarily - easier to produce also anti-war films. Also, these productions often very well depict the effects on society in the post-war era and beyond.

4.4 Type of material

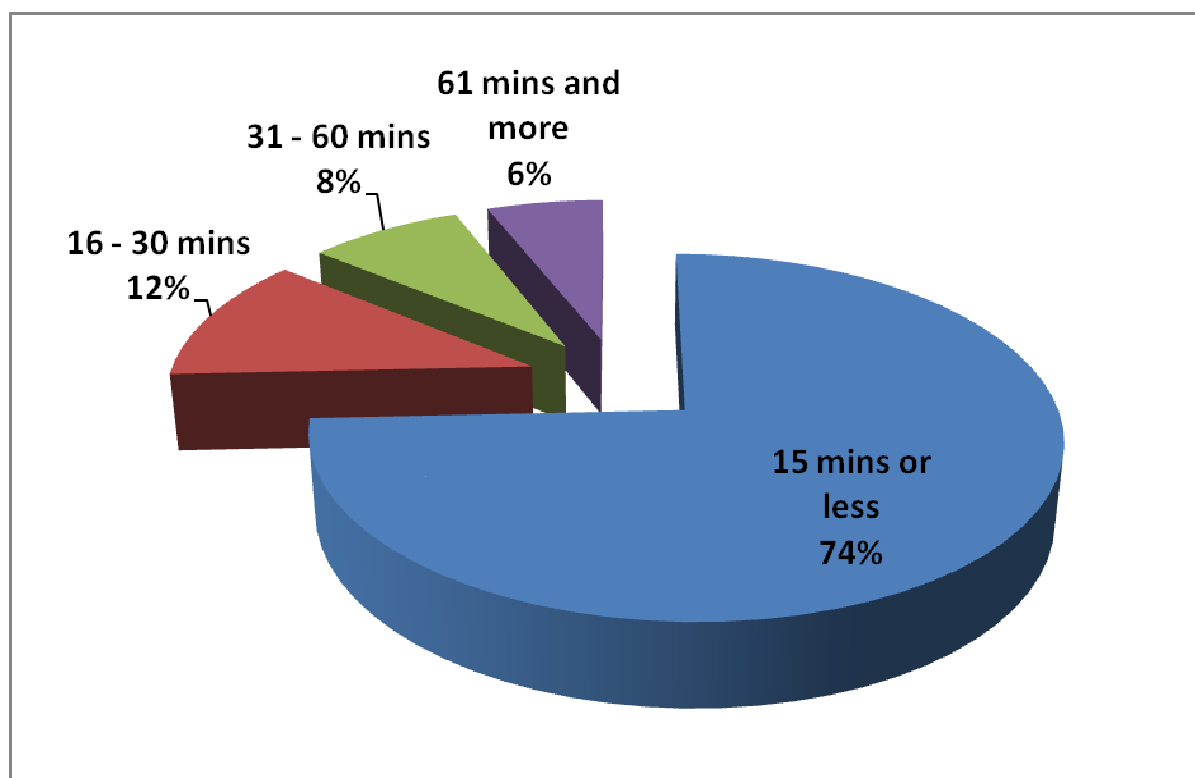

The following diagram shows what type of materials the users can expect to find in the EFG1914 collection. The focus is clearly on non-fiction films, which make up for 77% of the films digitised. However, as stated in the DOW, archives also digitised fiction films to give some insight in the film production at the time of the war.

Category of films digitised in EFG1914

4.5 Duration of videos

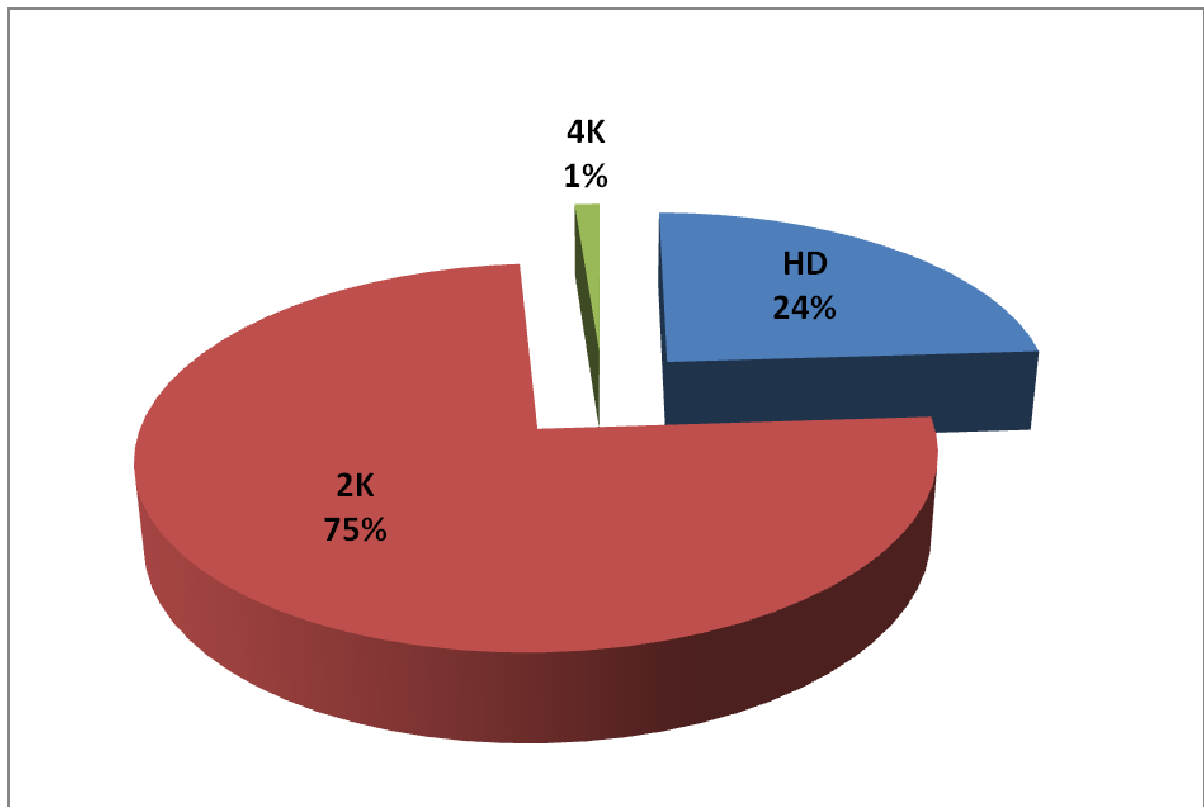

In WWI film was a relatively young medium. Long feature films were still very rare at the beginning of the 1910s. In fact the First World War was the period when more and more long feature films would be produced and screened in the cinema. This had first and foremost to do with the fact that states were investing large sums of money especially in the later war years in film production once they had realised the potential of film as a propaganda medium. Reflecting the fact that the majority of films produced, where of a shorter duration, also the great majority of films digitised in EFG1914 is no longer than 15 minutes. Also, seeing that 77% of the content made accessible is non-fiction, many of the films digitised are in fact short films showing images from either different theatres of war or else from different home fronts.

4.6 Quality of scans

As foreseen in the DOW, one aim of the EFG1914 project was to familiarise the archives in the consortium with handling digital files and help them implementing digital workflows. Therefore, the selected films should be digitised in HD or a higher quality like 2K that would allow for projection in cinemas or re-use by TV companies or other scenarios requiring high resolution files. As can be seen in the following pie chart this aim was met as the vast majority of films was actually digitised in 2K, while the Norwegian National Library (NB) even managed to digitise their films in 4K.

4.7 Collection descriptions

In order to give a more in depth overview on the content that have been digitised in the EFG1914 project, this chapter focuses on the content descriptions provided by the partners so far. As could be seen in the previous chapters, most archives have a focus on the national production during the times of the First World War.

4.7.1 Arhiva Nationala de Filme (ANF)

The collection that ANF provides to the EFG1914 project comprises mostly documentary films and newsreels produced in Romania between 1914 and 1920, approaching the local participation in World War One, as well as a short fiction film produced in 1926 and a medium-length fiction film produced in 1930, both based on real war events. The collection aims at reflecting not only Romania's direct involvement in the international conflagration, but also how Romanians, from the higher to the lower levels of society, perceived the war and the wartime experiences. Unfortunately, during Communist times, many reels were burnt, because the films were in contradiction with the official party policy, so those films exist now only through the scripts that have been saved by the Archive.

4.7.2 Cineteca Del Friuli (CDF)

The Cineteca del Friuli holds in its collections a selection of Italian silent films that make up the "Great War Fund" and can be made available to the audience. They include numerous restorations curated by the Cineteca itself over the years, originating from nitrate copies, and various other acquisitions. The fund includes both documentary, newsreels and fictional movies and can be divided into three groups: I. films about the war in Libya, that Italy fought between 1911 and 1912 against the Ottoman Empire and a forerunner of the First World War. Both documentaries and fictional films want to bolster the Italian military intervention in Tripolitania and Cyrenaica and show the superiority of the Italian military. II. Documentary and war newsreels, made between 1914 and 1918 by the Royal Army, leading the viewer directly to the sites of the Great War - mountains, the trench, the city - close up showing the armies in action, prisoners, arms, devastation and death, but also celebrations for the end of the war and the Italian victory. III. post-war documentaries, from "Gloria", celebrating the "unknown soldier", symbolising the sacrifice of a whole nation, to "La Sentinella della Patria" which is a portrayal of everyday life – once the war is over – in the sites that were the scene of hostilities.

4.7.3 Archives Françaises du Film – Centre National de la Cinématographie (CNC)

The films provided by CNC are films produced both, during the war and in the post-war period. Fiction, documentary, short, and feature-length films show the War to End all Wars from diverse points of view: propagandist news, patriotic fiction, antimilitarist pamphlets, animated films, historic reconstructions, educational documentaries, and scientific tools.

4.7.4 Cinémathèque royale de Belgique (CRB)

The CINEMATEK World War One collection contains a large variety of newsreels, documentary and feature films, mostly produced in the decade after the war. The images include representations of Belgium ("Poor Little Belgium ") as a victim of the 'Great War', the fate and suffering of women during the war or the Flemish emancipation and how films mainly produced by Clemens De Landtsheer contributed to the myth of the Flemish soldier on the Yser. During the war a film unit (Le Service Cinématographique de l'Armée belge) was formed by the Belgian Army. Once the country was liberated, the Belgian audiences could look their images of life behind the trenches, together with reports on dozens of patriotic manifestations, which were attended by war invalids and veterans.

4.7.5 Det Danske Filminstitut (DFI)

DFI delivers documentary footage and films from the period 1914-1918. The DFI collection contains both general "news" items from the period, with events and actuality items, but also some of the earliest footage from the German captured territories in Northern France and Prussia. Since Denmark was not directly involved in the war, most of the directly war related films are Danish versions of films from other countries. However, the KRIGSBILLEDER I-VII (1914) are among the earliest images from the war affected areas. Fiction films from the period 1914-1918. Denmark, and especially the Nordisk Film Co., was one of the dominant film industries internationally in the early 1910s. The films made available both give an impression of different genres during the period and give a general insight into what met the audiences attending the movies during the war. The long feature film format had become the standard for motion picture entertainment in the years preceding the First World War, and Nordisk Film was a dominant vertically integrated company with substantial theatrical investments in Central Europe. Many of the films are typical entertainment films, but a few have a strong pacifist message, among them PRO PATRIA, PAX ÆTERNA and NED MED VAABNENE, which led to the postponement of their release until later in, or after, the war.

4.7.6 Deutsches Filminstitut (DIF)

DIF contributed 38 hours of newsreels and propaganda films produced during the First World War. The selection includes material from the rights owners Bundesarchiv-Filmarchiv and the Murnau Foundation. Part of the selection are several hours of films produced by the Bild- und Filmamt (BUFA) whose foundation was initiated by Erich Ludendorff in 1917 with the aim to produce film material for propaganda films on a large scale. Furthermore, several editions of the newsreel Messter-Woche (Messter Week) were digitised through DIF. A small amount of fiction films produced during WWI gives insight in the kind of films audiences got to see in cinemas both at home and at the front.

4.7.7 EYE Film Institute Netherlands (EYE)

EYE provides newsreels, travelogues and also fiction films from the period of 1914 to 1918 from numerous countries. Furthermore, a number of films preceding and following this period are added to the selection, such as documentation about the Boer War, Balkan Wars of 1912-1913 and Italian-Turkish war on Libya (1911-1912), as well as several documentaries made shortly after the end of the War, showing its aftermath. The Netherlands was among the neutral countries, yet it also got involved in the war in various ways: Belgian refugees were kept and aided, troops of British soldiers were stationed near the borders of Germany, the production of goods and international trade were affected. After the war, Kaiser Wilhelm and his wife got exiled to the Netherlands and lived in Soest until his death. The film material received through his legacy is also represented among the EYE films in EFG1914. EYE film collection has an international character, due to its collection policy based on collecting all kinds of films that were distributed in the country. This variety is also reflected in the selection made for EFG1914; films from ten countries are presented, including USA, Switzerland, Germany and Denmark.

4.7.8 Estonian Film Archives (EFA)

Estonian Film Archives is giving access to 6 films. Two of the films – "Tartu and its Surroundings" and "Tartu Volunteer Firefighters' Society Celebrating its 50th Anniversary" – depict war-time life in the Southern Estonian town of Tartu, called Dorpat at the time. The films were made by the very first Estonian filmmaker – Johannes Pääsuke. In addition, there are three war chronicles depicting actual war activity: Pathé newreel no 37 – Australian soldiers, French soldiers, American troops and bases etc; Chronicle: Russia 1917, Brest-Litovks 1918; USA in WW I. Until 1918 Estonia was a part of the Russian Empire, during World War One, on 24th of February 1918, the Republic of Estonia was declared. Estonia as a state never took part in the war but the war enabled our republic to be established.

4.7.9 Filmoteca Española (FE)

FE digitises a selection of documentaries, newsreels and non-fiction movies showing the Spanish daily city and country life during the second decade of the 20th century. Amateur movies are also included. Newsreels include international news of WWI (The Battle of the Somme, Marshall Von MacKensen advancing on Dobrudja... and more). Some of the first Spanish motion pictures released in that period like El alcalde de Zalamea ("The Mayor of Zalamea", 1914) or Las patatas fritas ("Potato chips", 1916) can also be found.

4.7.10 Fondazione Cineteca Italiana (FCI)

FCI digitises and gives access to the collection of films shot by Luca Comerio, a pioneer of Italian cinema. His oeuvre covers a period from the beginning of the 20th century until about 1920 and consists of over 30 works, including documentaries, excerpts and short comedy sketches. A cinereporter always present on the sites of the major events of that period, Comerio was appointed the first and foremost operator of the Royal House. Fascinated by the idea of progress and military technology, he followed the Italian troops at the front during the colonial wars and the First World War, leaving the viewer images full of drama. In addition to that collection, FCI provides further films stemming from their silent film collection, including some great classics, but also many lesser known films of great historical value, like children's films and works of moral and didactic purpose, able to return trends and climate of the production of that period.

4.7.11 Imperial War Museums (IWM)

IWM contributes around 250 hours of First World War material, 190 hours of which were digitised in the EFG1914 project. The collection illustrates all aspects of the conflict, both at home and on the fighting fronts. It includes the renowned film The Battle of the Somme - now granted UNESCO Memory of the World status – which shows trench warfare as captured by official army cameramen. There are also films covering the war at sea and in the air, propaganda, women's war effort and the involvement of Commonwealth troops.

4.7.12 Cineteca di Bologna (CCB)

CCB contributes a series of the silent films restored by Cineteca di Bologna to the project. The selection includes newsreels and documentaries shot during the Italian colonial campaign in Lybia; propaganda shorts depicting the bravery of the Italian Army before the War; Italian documentaries on the Italian Army in the trenches (including films by the Italian producer and cameraman Luca Comerio); documentaries on the advance of the Austrian Army after the Battle of Caporetto; Italian propaganda films aimed at raising funds for the war; documentaries on Italian soldiers suffering war injuries; short documentaries and various fiction films shot during the war. The selection made for EFG1914 also contains some documentaries shot after the war. They are films recalling the war from different perspectives: historical documentaries; films commemorating the war; the consequences of the war on the everyday life, on the landscape, on the Italian society, on the art of many personalities.

4.7.13 Nasjonalbiblioteket (NNB)

In many of the neutral countries daily life continued more or less unaffected by the war. The films from the National Library of Norway illustrate the quotidian life in Norway during the years 1914-1918, far removed from the trenches. However, information about the war reached Norway through international newsreels from companies such as Gaumont, Éclair and Pathé, often with Norwegian intertitles - and composes a part of the Norwegian contribution to the EFG1914 project. Some highlights in the collection include High Commissioner for Refugees Fridtjof Nansen, League of Nations; Fridtjof Nansen in the Soviet Union, 1921; and Dr. Nansen and the Great Famine. This collection of films shows the efforts of the League of Nations after World War I, and specifically the work of its High Commissioner - Dr Fridtjof Nansen from Norway. Dr. Nansen's main brief was the repatriation of around half a million prisoners of war, stranded in various parts of the world. At the same time he tried to tackle the urgent problem of famine in Russia. The famine resulted from the combined effect of economic disturbance, which had already started during World War I, and continued through the disturbances of the Russian Revolution of 1917 and the Russian Civil War. In 1922 Dr. Nansen was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for his work on behalf of the displaced victims of the First World War and related conflicts.

4.7.14 Národní filmový archiv (NFA)

The NFA film collection digitised for EFG1914 contains newsreels, documentary and feature films, produced in the period 1914–1934. The most interesting part of the collection includes the images of Czechoslovak volunteers and legionnaires fighting in the Russian, French and Italian army. However, the selection also includes shots mapping a situation behind the front (war supplying, testing of explosives, celebrations), depicting results of war (army hospitals with injured soldiers, return of soldiers after the end of the conflict) and images of activities revitalising collective memory on the World War One (unveiling of monuments to the memory of victims of the Word War One).

4.7.15 Österreichisches Filmmuseum (OFM)

The Kinonedelja (Kino-Week) newsreels that OFM digitises in EFG1914 constitute the first films of Dziga Vertov. A total of 43 issues, each containing an average of 5 to 7 different items, were produced between May 1918 and June 1919. Vertov joined the newsreel's ranks as a secretary but by the fall of 1918 had taken on full responsibility for the series, defining the content and structure of each issue. In some cases, Vertov even functioned as director of the newsreels. In the 1970s, the Austrian Film Museum received prints of 14 clearly identifiable issues of Kinonedelja from Sweden. The films provide an invaluable record of life in the young Soviet Russia, then in the throes of civil war.

7 Final remarks

As many aspects in the chapters in this report indicate, the EFG1914 project has reached its goals concerning the digitisation of the selected EFG1914 material by the partners. The monitoring of the project by WP1 and the setup of the digitisation lists have led to an effective collaboration between the participating EFG1914 partners.

As also described in the chapters in this deliverable, the goal for digitisation of films has been exceeded by the partner archives. As an additional benefit of the EFG1914 project, it showed that working on the same subject at the same time, allows the archives to really get to compare their collections and even discover unknown material as it turned out to be the case.
