SCOPE
The FIRST-Nuclides project is established with the overall objective to provide for improved understanding of the fast / instantly released radionuclides from dispersed high burn-up UO2 spent nuclear fuel. The knowledge and data obtained will reduce the uncertainties and will provide for realistic data on the relevant radionuclides release for the Safety Case leading to an increased confidence in capability of predictions.

WORKSHOP OBJECTIVES
The main focus of the Workshop is the dissemination and discussion of scientific and technical project results obtained at the first year of the project. In association with the workshop, a Topical Session including specific talks on "Modeling of fuel burnup" will be held.
Additionally, the project participants will have the opportunity to discuss administrative and future implementation issues.
The project workshop is open to external participants who are highly welcome.

PUBLICATION
After the meeting the scientific outcome will be published through workshop proceedings as KIT scientific report and it will be available from KIT services and in the project webpage.
