

Figure 1: The chemical proteomics approach used in this research. A probe is designed based on a bioactive compound (in this case, DYN). The probe consists of a photoreactive group (red) and a clickable tag (blue). Upon binding to its protein target and UV irradiation, the photoprobe crosslinks to the protein target. The tag can later be used to isolate the protein for identification.