Project description

A study of new forms of trade unionism and mobilisation

Membership levels in trade unions have been in decline in Europe since the early 1980s, largely due to the growing number of employees who choose not to join a trade union. Another related trend that has been observed is the drop in the actual power and representation of trade unions in the workforce and in politics. At the same time, wealth inequalities and economic insecurity are growing and there is a rise in extremist political parties in some EU Member States. The EU-funded CODE project will investigate the link between trade unionism and its reach in the digital era.
Focusing on the situation in Greece, Spain and the United Kingdom, the project will study how interest representation and workers’ empowerment might be enhanced.
